

Dr.Nitikorn Phoosuwan

Associate Professor

Nitikorn Phoosuwan is an Associate Professor in Public Health at the Faculty of Public Health, Thammasat University, Thailand.

He obtained bachelor's degrees in Public Health and in Occupational Health and Safety, Master's degree in Public Health Science (Infectious Diseases and Epidemiology) from universities in Thailand and a PhD in Public Health and Caring Sciences (on a study of prevention perinatal depressive symptoms among women) from Faculty of Medicine, Uppsala University, Sweden.

Role in MPH in Global Health

Dr.Nitikorn Phoosuwan teaches courses related to public health perspectives, qualitative study, and epidemiology. He also serves as an advisor, co-advisor and academic committee for master's degree students in the program.

Fields of Interest

- Community Public Health
- Epidemiology of Non-communicable Diseases
- Social determinants of Health/ of Mental Health
- Public Health Administration and Management
- Intervention and Implementation Science

Research Partners

Dr.Nitikorn Phoosuwan has worked with organizations in Thailand, such as the ministry of Public Health, ministry of higher education, and outside Thailand, e.g. Singapore, Sweden, USA.

Thesis supervision

He serves as a thesis/IS advisor and on thesis/IS examination committees for the MPH/PhD in Global Health Program and other programs in public health

Further information

